

Federal and State Employment Standards and U.S. Farm Labor

An online reference guide to labor protective laws and their applicability in the agricultural workplace

Researched and Edited by BRIAN R. CRADDOCK

April 2017

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

The analysis of the labor protective provisions summarized on this website was performed under a grant from the Employment and Training Administration, U.S. Department of Labor. MET wishes to extend thanks to the Division of National Programs for its financial support for the project. Likewise, for their cooperation in reviewing the draft, much of the credit for the reliability of the content goes to the 423 federal and state agencies responsible for administration of the laws described herein.

EDITORIAL RESPONSIBILITY AND RIGHTS

The findings and opinions expressed in this publication are those of Motivation Education & Training, Inc., and do not necessarily reflect the position or policy of the U.S. Department of Labor, or of the other federal and state agencies responsible for the administration or enforcement of the laws and agency rules summarized herein. No official endorsement of this material by any public agency should be inferred. The reference guide may be freely reproduced or quoted without permission, but citation of the source will be appreciated.

MOTIVATION EDUCATION & TRAINING, INC.

Post Office Box 1838
New Caney, Texas 77357
281.689.5544

Stacey Taylor, Executive Director